EDITOR'S NOTES

This copy of The Old Altrinchamian is most probably the least interesting of any you have been privileged to read. I say privileged, because to be a regular reader you are either a pupil of the School, a member of the O.A.A., or a close relative of one or the other.

Membership of the O.A.A. carries with it many advantages.

In these days sentimentality is rapidly vanishing from our lives under the strain of anxieties. Anxieties perhaps for success in business, and the prospects available in the rough and tumble of settling down in an (apparently) financially shattered world.

To improve contacts with old friends can only be of benefit to all of us. Those of us who are shrewd enough, must be aware of the value of meeting our old friends regularly, either in business or socially.

What a different atmosphere pervades when we meet as "Jack" or "George" to that of "Mr." So-and-So and "Mr." So-and-So.
